

From jingles to jazz with lots in between, singer Renée Marquis trained classically, spent 9 years touring central and eastern Canada in various rock bands, jingling all the way and eventually landed back in NL, where she fronted the Rick Hollett Jazz ensemble, joined the Ed Goff Big Band, the Jim Duff Little Big Band and the Bill Rose Blues Band, as well as session singing at various studios from TO to NL.

She has worked with most local jazz legends from (late greats) Ralph Walker and Leo Sandoval and with Paul Bendsza in the Mun Jazz ensemble in their Gold Medal performances at the Canadian Jazz Festival (c 1980), to more recently, Pat Boyle and Bill Brennan.

First known for cohosting CBC's "Step to Stardom", she joined the cast of TaDA Entertainment's "Our Divas Do Christmas" this year.

Renée has been a featured performer with the NSO from time to time during her career and is delighted to be appearing on "Christmas at the Movies"!
