

Steve Power has been part of the local music scene here in St. John's for more than 25 years, both onstage and behind the scenes. As a singer, guitar player and technician he has been involved in multiple aspects of performing and production in hundreds of shows, concerts and musicals all around the province.

Steve is currently the production manager for the Newfoundland Symphony Orchestra and is delighted to be involved with this wonderful show and to work alongside such unbelievably talented people.